Study on Madras hedgehog gets rolling; radio-tagged one gives birth

S GODSON WISELY DASS
@ Thoothukudi

A Madras hedgehog that was tagged telemetrically recently gave birth to a hoglet in a burrow at a palmyra grove near the Sathankulam teri forest. This is the first time in the country, radio telemetry has been used to track this tiny creature recognised by prickly spines over its body.

The population of the rarely seen mammal has drastically declined due to habitat destruction, and hunting for the myth of its medicinal value.

The Tamil Nadu government funded a study on the species, Paraechinus nudiventris, in the 2025-26 financial year in Thoothukudi, Tirunelveli, Salem and Kallakurichi districts.

According to Tiruchendur Forest Range officer N Ajay, the experts tagged three adult Madras hedgehogs: two females at a palmyra grove near Sathankulam, and one male at the teri (redsand) forest in Kuthiraimozhi.

The first female Madras hedgehog was tagged by radio telemetry specialists Dr Thirumurugan and official Gopalakrishnan of the Advanced Institute for Wildlife Conservation (AIWC) on September 24. It weighed 289 grams, and the transmitter was fixed on its back at the spine in order to study its home range, navigation, habitat, foraging sites, and burrows, he said.

"The female Madras hedgehog delivered one hoglet at its burrow located under a palmyra tree," confirmed Ajay.

"We are continuously observing the tagged animal in the morning (6 am to 9 am), afternoon (2 pm to 5 pm) and evening (9 pm to 1 am). As we did not see the female adult species for the three days, we peeped into its burrow on October 12 and were surprised to see it with an offspring," said a research scholar involved in the study.

The study titled "Conservation of Endangered Species - Madras Hedgehog" includes questionnaire survey, field survey, roadkill survey, and land use-land cover study at the targeted districts.

Questionnaire surveys and field surveys have been completed in Salem and Kallakurichi districts, said sources.

According to experts, the nocturnal species that is native to southern India lives for nearly 4-5 years. It feeds on insects, ants, termites, grasshoppers, and others. Its spine protects it from other predators, and it typically curls like a ball on the ground when threatened, they added.

The animal used to be found in dry scrublands of Tamil Nadu, Kerala, Karnataka and Andhra Pradesh in the southern peninsula, but its numbers have declined over the past few decades.

The Madras hedgehog is protected under Schedule 2 of the Wildlife Protection Act. The International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) has categorised the species as of "Least Concern" (without proper data).

During the study, which began in January, 2026, forest personnel and the research team had sighted over 10 Madras hedgehogs in Thoothukudi district.

Its movements, foraging places, food habits, temporary stay and burrows are being mapped as a part of the study, forest officials said.

Commenting on the reproduction of a Madras hedgehog tagged with a transmitter, District Forest Officer M Ilayaraja told TNIE that it is a major intervention in the study of the threatened species.

Since it has been very rarely documented before, the data about its survival, foraging and reproduction are limited and require a detailed study. It plays a vital role in the food chain and ecological balance. The small mammal should be protected and its contribution to the ecological balance should be appreciated, he said.

Nellai cops arrest KL gang for ₹28.5L fraud

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Tirunelveli

TIRUNELVELI city cybercrime police arrested three men from Kerala on Tuesday for allegedly cheating a retired TNSTC official of ₹28.5 lakh by threatening him with 'digital arrest' and claiming that his bank accounts were being used for Naxal activities.

The accused persons were identified as Ravikumar (52), Dinesh (52) and Abdul Samadhu (50), all residents of different places in Kerala.

The victim, Ananthappan (61), a resident of Thachanallur, had retired a few months ago as a checking inspector with the TNSTC.

Sources say a man contacted Ananthappan on his mobile phone on October 6, posing as a National Investigation Agency (NIA) officer in Mumbai. The caller claimed that bank accounts had been opened in six States using the victim's phone number and that money was being transferred to Naxal extremists through them. The next day, another person, dressed in a police uniform, contacted Ananthappan through a WhatsApp video call and threatened to place him under 'digital arrest'. A third person contacted him, claiming he was an ADGP. The fraudsters subsequently obtained details of his bank accounts and savings," said sources.

Under the pretext of an investigation, they made him to transfer ₹28.5 lakh to a bank. After talking to his son and son-in-law, the victim realised that he had been cheated.

Based on his complaint, the Tirunelveli city cybercrime police registered a case and arrested the three suspects.

No paid darshan at Mutharamman temple till Oct 21

THOOTHUKUDI: In view of the Dussehra, the Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowment (HR&CE) has withdrawn paid darshan at the Mutharamman temple at Kulasekarapattinam until the culmination of the festival on October 21. The arrival of devotees at the Mutharamman temple has increased since the commencement of the festival on October 11. The temple has arranged a separate queue for senior citizens, differently abled and pregnant women. Speaking to TNIE, a temple official said there is only a general queue which is free for all, with the withdrawal of paid darshan for 11 days. For a hassle-free visit, senior citizens, differently-abled and pregnant women have been provided a separate queue, he said. ENS
